Course Overview

Story telling has been around for centuries and our understanding of life is often based on what we have read. Drawing on a love of all things fictional, this course examines how Literature is created through the author's choice of themes, characters, plot development and language. Over the course of two years, we will explore the books themselves and consider the impact of the time periods and contexts in which they were written.

If you love reading, writing and class discussions that reflect on the meaning and impact a text can have, then this course is for you.

Students follow the Pearson Edexcel A Level English Literature specification.
